Five students win all-expense paid trip

Haliburton Buckslide Blues Society contest expands winner list from two to five

The Haliburton Buckslide Blues Society (HBBS) held a contest at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School on Wednesday, May 25 for music students in the area to compete in the blues genre for a chance to win an all-expense paid spot in the coveted Grand River Blues Camp held each year during the Kitchener Blues Festival. Five judges marked the performers on a standard weighted blues music competition scoring system used in major blues events around North America. Categories included blues content, originality, vocals, instrumental talent and stage presence.

The judges for the contest were Patrick Monaghan, president, Highlands Buckslide Blues Society; Mark Riemenschneider, a blues enthusiast; Louise Ewing, treasurer, Highlands Buckslide Blues Society; Dennis Coumo, Grand River Blues Society, youth camp instructor, and Neil Tarswell, Grand River Blues Society, youth camp instructor.

The main prize for the top two musicians is an all-expense paid, coveted spot at The Grand River Blues Camp, a four-day music course attended by youth from around the world where students receive training not only in their instruments of choice, but in vocals, lyrics, song writing, team building and so much more. The camp culminates in a concert where the students perform together and then participate with all of the blues bands that played during the festival!

Five students auditioned with the following results:

- First place – Keenan Ryan. Keenan received a HBBS trophy and chose a Denver Acoustic Guitar provided by Long and McQuade, Peterborough along with his all-expense paid trip to the music camp.
- Second place – William Craftchick. In addition to the music camp award, William received an HBBS trophy, and accepted $450 towards the purchase of an instrument from HaliUkes/Yorkville, Haliburton, which includes a DVD about the blues and instructor fees, along with his all-expense paid trip to the music camp.

The judges were so impressed by the talent displayed during the auditions that sponsorship to the camp has been found for the remaining three musicians:

- Grace Judge chose a Denver Acoustic Guitar provided by Long and McQuade, Peterborough, along with her all-expense paid trip to the music camp.
- Laren Main chose a ukulele package from HaliUkes/Yorkville, Algonquin Highlands, which includes a ukulele, Blues at the Crossroads Duets for Baritone & Soprano Vol 1 & 2, by Manitoba Hal Brolund and a video review/tutorial sessions with the author, along with his all-expense paid trip to the music camp.
- Myles Sharp chose to accept $450 towards the purchase of an instrument from HaliUkes/Yorkville,
- Algonquin Highlands, Blues at the Crossroads Duets for Baritone & Soprano Vol 1 & 2, by Manitoba Hal Brolund and a video review/tutorial sessions with the author, along with his all-expense paid trip to the music camp.

The Haliburton Buckslide Blues Society wants to thank the high school, the judges, our prize sponsors, Long and McQuade - Peterborough and HaliUkes, who donated approximately $960 in prizes – Algonquin Highlands, the Grand River Blues Camp and all those who dropped in to watch the event and especially the contestants for putting their talents on stage for all to see and hear.

Float tubes come up big on small waters

STEVE GALEA

Outdoors

The inflatable float tube's advantage is how it can enable anglers such as the author, pictured, to get to small inaccessible lakes. /Submitted by Steve Galea

There is a time and a place for every type of fishing boat. In big waters, where anglers need to make long runs to prime fishing locations, there's nothing better than a modern bass boat for fishing safely and efficiently. On mid-sized cottage lakes, a good tin boat with a reliable outboard is hard to beat for its economy, ruggedness, ease of maintenance, and ability to get to all corners of the lake in reasonable time. And in those smaller, quiet waters, where boat ramps are rough or non-existent or access requires a portage or two, well, that's where non-motorized boats, like kayaks and canoes, shine.

I've had a lot of fun in just about every kind of boat described. But the most fun I've had lately has been fishing out of a float tube.

What is a float tube? Well, it is essentially a ripstop nylon sleeve that has a seat and storage compartments sewn in. This is slipped over a couple of inflatable bladders that possess enough buoyancy to float up to 350 pounds. Once fully inflated, you basically have a floating reclining chair, positioned so your legs from the knees down hang into the water. That is so your flipper-clad feet can be used to propel the craft. Think of a dressed up inner tube with a comfortable seat in the middle and you have the basic idea, although most modern float tubes are u-shaped with a pointed prow, and rugged and lighter in weight.

The float tube advantage

OK, I'll admit, at first glance, they look silly. And, often, when you are fishing out of one, people in other types of watercrafts will sometimes pull up beside you, strike up a conversation, and eventually ask if you are OK.

But forget that – these things are just plain fun to fish out of. They're so much fun that a couple of my friends have purchased them too and when we go out as a group, we spend as much time laughing as catching fish. Because float tubes are also known as, "belly boats" we call ourselves, "The Navel Academy."

Sure, you can't cover as much water as you would in a motorized boat, canoe or kayak, but over the course of a day an ambitious and energetic angler in a float tube can thoroughly fish a couple of kilometres (or more) of productive water. I say thoroughly, because the proper use of your flippers will allow you to quietly stay on a spot where fish are or move you along at a nice trolling speed.

I have a rod holder and a portable fish finder mounted on mine, so I typically troll, or periodically change positions and cast, until I locate fish or structure. Once I have found fish, I use my flippers to remain stationary so that I can cast

This little brook trout was caught by the author from his float tube. /Submitted by Steve Galea

Once I have found fish, I use my flippers to remain stationary so that I can cast until I have thoroughly fished the spot.

Did I mention that my float tube has backpacking straps and weighs 14 pounds fully loaded? This means I can easily walk it into lakes or isolated stretches of river that might even be challenging to portage a canoe into.

In lakes of 100 acres or less, or in gently flowing creeks and rivers, these things are right at home. If you have two or more anglers, you can do long float trips too. Just arrange a pick-up, or take one vehicle to the landing at the end of your float.

Speaking of vehicles, once deflated, a float tube will easily fit in the back of an SUV or trunk of a car. Mine is a permanent fixture in the back of my SUV, along with a fly rod during the summer months. So, if the urge to fish overtakes me, I can stop inflate my float tube and be on the water in five minutes.

Also, if a canoe or motorized boat isn't in the budget right now, these won't break the bank – you can get an entry level float tube complete with flippers for under $300 and, if you want to spend double that, you can get yourself a really high-end model.

But back to the fun part. You haven't lived until you've fought a three- or four-pound smallmouth that is bulldogging towards bottom between your flippers. Earlier this spring, my best buddy and I spent a morning float tubing on a small brook trout lake and did just fine too.

But before you go out and get yourself one, let me warn you, fishing all day in a float tube is – how do I say this delicately? – well, exercise. By the end of an outing, your legs are rubber from continually kicking those big flippers. And when we hit shore, it takes a while for all the boys in the Navel Academy to find our land legs again.

But once we do that, deflate our tubes, and put our gear way, we're already planning the next trip. Float tubes are that much fun.

A trip into the past

KATE BUTLER
Special to County Life

WITH THE May long-weekend already in the rearview mirror, summer has arrived in the Haliburton Highlands, at least unofficially. The arrival of summery weather also means an influx of visitors from near and far. This, however, has long been the case, so I want to invite you on a little journey into Haliburton's past through the eyes of a long ago summer visitor.

As a traveler coming to the area, the first question on your mind may have been how best to get here. The arrival of the railway in Haliburton in 1878 is often thought of as a mixed story, but there can be no doubt that in the long run it was beneficial for our local tourism industry. When local roads were still basic at best and automobiles, once they eventually became available, were somewhat temperamental, having a way to begin a holiday in relative comfort was a huge bonus. Once a mode of transit was decided upon, there was still the question of where to stop, as there were many choices between Lindsay and Haliburton. Some may have chosen to stay on lakes such as Kashagawigamog or Canning, but let's say that you chose to ride right to the end of the line in Haliburton.

Arriving in town, you would have discovered that there were a number of places ready to take in summer guests. Would the Lucas family's Grand Central Hotel have suited your needs? It was certainly an impressive and ornate building and the Lucas family's hospitality was legendary, but given its main street location, some might have thought it better suited to those on business as opposed to vacation.

At the far end of the lake, where Haliburton Highlands Secondary School is located today, tourists could have also found rooms at Newnham, the home of the Stewart family. Charles and Teresa Stewart had come to the village in the 1860s, due to his work for the Canadian Land and Emigration Company. Before long, however, Charles was working for lumber baron Mossom Boyd. Newnham, though constructed for the family, was larger than their needs called for and seeing an opportunity, the Stewart family began to cater to tourists. Doing so in the 19th Century would have made them quite the local groundbreakers at the time. Their home was also a well-known venue for arts and culture and likely many of the events, which took place there would have been open to their guests as well.

If you tired of events at Newnham and chose to explore the area, you would have found then, as now, that Haliburton was a bustling place. The pages of those few issues of the Echo, which survive from the late 19th and early 20th Century attest to a variety of community events, with parades often being a favourite. If you had happened to be in town on the right evening in August, you might have even been able to catch the Calithumpian Parade. This annual merrymaking event might have seemed a little cryptic to you, full of inside jokes and community knowledge, but one thing that wouldn't have gotten past you was a float paying tribute to local railway, with a train that "broke down" on the way to the judging at the fairgrounds. Apparently, this was considered hilarious, as it was so true to form. Hmmm … might we suggest packing some extra sandwiches and lemonade for your trip back?

Wherever your adventures take you this summer, I hope they're filled with happiness, fun and smooth travel!

Top 10 reasons we never domesticated bears

IT'S FAIRLY common knowledge that we once domesticated wolves and they eventually evolved into the dogs we know and love. But very few people realize that we tried this experiment on more than just dogs and cats. Bears immediately come to mind. Sadly, that failed. Here are the top 10 reasons why.

STEVE GALEA
Humour Columnist

1. The hugs were too much.
2. They were a pain during picnic season.
3. The poop and scoop part ...
4. Continually scared the crap out of the mailman.
5. It was fine until they started thinking they were lap dogs.
6. The fish in the aquarium continually went missing.
7. Got crowded when they decided to sleep in the bed with you.
8. Who wants a pet that sleeps through winter?
9. Firemen refused to get them down from trees.
10. You think your dog drags you on a lead?

Feeling

Clouds billowing from the painter's brush, smudges of mist smearing Air, as well as the canvas,
as Lake weaves beneath layers of Sky,
the painter peeling them away to reveal stipples of light,
breaking through the fog,
brush strokes of grey in shades of Sky and Lake and rock, as the painter births the landscape into being with her brush on the dock.
I stand on the shore, still as the pebbles beneath my feet, watching the painter contour boulders and blot clouds, blurring the border between lake and Sky,
adding texture to Air, that changes before my eyes,
the mist rising in swirls on the canvas,
the smear of shore, riddled with rocks,
the painting pulsing with a feeling of awakening, adding and scraping away layers,
as I stare out across the lake,
its stillness spilling onto the canvas, wisps of white bleeding through the grey,
the painting changing as light leeks from Sky, capturing the feeling of morning the moment before the mist lifts, as the painter pauses to drink in the view, and I wonder whether she feels what she sees, or sees what she feels, transforming the landscape with sweeps of her brush, smoothing the edges of rocks, the contours of clouds,
the canvas washed in the light that's muted,
not bright,
like Sun stroking stones.
I wonder as I watch both her brush strokes and the Sky, whether she knows it when the painting is finished, whether she feels it with her eyes, or a deeper seeing, inside whether she will let the painting rest and breathe, after she leaves the dock and returns to it to add or peel away layers, or whether she will leave it be, freezing the memory of the feeling she had,
of a morning on the dock as the mist lifted and the light dripped down, bathing the Lake in a sheen of peace.

Sylvie Kalenda

Finally

Noticed single spectral call that came from some wild throat
Knew this wasn't loneliness since something answered back
Not from me did emanate crescendo high-plus note
But reply from second bird in private dark soundtrack

Only then did my old ears participate in chat
I on outdoor chair sat bug-bit-silent in my place
Proudly from the water came fresh word of habitat
Where paired loons filled silent night with tunes of trust and grace

I am not quite settled into season shift until
I have heard these first communications on the wind
Loons for me and others cause our winter hearts to fill
With warm invitation to becoming thinner-skinned

Something free and ancient then regifts to human soul
Takes a simple loon call to urge empty folk to wake Feeling not superior, but small and part of whole Waiting for our poet chance to marry with the lake.

Haliburton Home & Cottage Show is back

JERELYN CRADEN

Special to County Life

The highly anticipated Haliburton Home and Cottage Show (HHCS) is back at the Haliburton Curling Club's A.J. LaRue arena for a three-day run -- Friday to Sunday, June 3 to 5 – after a two- year forced hiatus due to COVID. Started in 1977, today it is considered one of the best home and cottage shows in central Ontario.

"With over 130 vendors, many returning and several new this year, the show is sure to be exciting," said Dave Taylor, HHCS coordinator since 2017. "We have a whole bunch of new varieties of vendors that we've never had before."

There will be 2,500 to 3,000 visitors, who will venture through the 20,000 square feet of indoor and outdoor everything-home-and-cottage heaven for a $3 admission (children are free).

"The return of the Haliburton Home Show is a tremendous revenue boost for the community," Taylor said. "We have a lot of vendors who come up and need hotel/motel rooms to stay at during the run. They have meals in local restaurants. They gas-up in Haliburton. And, the visitors get a chance to see a varied number of vendors and businesses. Even our non-profit local groups including Places for People, Rotary Club of Haliburton and Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation (among others) get a chance to inform visitors about who they are and what they do."

New this year, RPM Marinas will display boats, ATVs, and some "new toys." Other new vendors include: Power Forward Electric, a full-service electrical contractor specializing in generators and custom home/cottages; Redfern Enterprises, a leading provider of smart home and health products including back and foot massagers and infrared heaters; London Eco-metal, steel and aluminum roofing specialists; and, Deep Roots Adventure that provides skills and tools for individuals/groups to become capable and confident in the wild.

"They're bringing a mechanical horse that they use as a teaching device," Taylor said.

Nortech Home Improvements, specializing in windows, doors, and sunrooms will have an indoor and outdoor display.

"Curry Motors, who has been with us since 1977, will have cars on display. And, Riverview Furniture always brings a good selection," Taylor said.

Home Hardware, Emmerson Lumber and a long list of other vendors will be back.

Always popular, Unidem, the largest demonstration company in Ontario will be onboard. "With their specialty pots and pans, plus various vibrating devices for the head, neck, and shoulders, they can definitely do cash sales at the show," Taylor said.

Dyanna Dreams, also popular with visitors, returns this year.

"They've been with us for awhile and always bring great products that many people go home with – bed sheets, blankets, and pillows and more."

For event food, the arena snack bar will be open.

"And the curling club lounge will serve up peameal on a bun, hotdogs, and all kinds of chili dogs and sausages, plus wine, beer and coolers," Taylor said.

"The Haliburton Curling Club will be holding our own little contest for two high-quality Adirondack chairs," he said.

Manufactured by Leisure Line of high-density polyethylene, the chairs have a 40-year warranty. In addition, several vendors will be holding draws.

"Of course, there's our doggy daycare service which we will offer again at no charge," Taylor said. This will enable visitors to enjoy some peace of mind as they browse the show knowing that their pets are being safely cared for in a protected area outside of the arena.

At present, there is no COVID mandate in place for the show. Mask wearing is up to the individual.

The show starts on Friday, June 3 and will be from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m. The next day on Saturday, June 4 it will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and then 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. when it concludes on Sunday June 5. For more information, visit haliburtonhomeandcottageshow. com. For vendor information, contact: halibhomeshow@gmail.com.

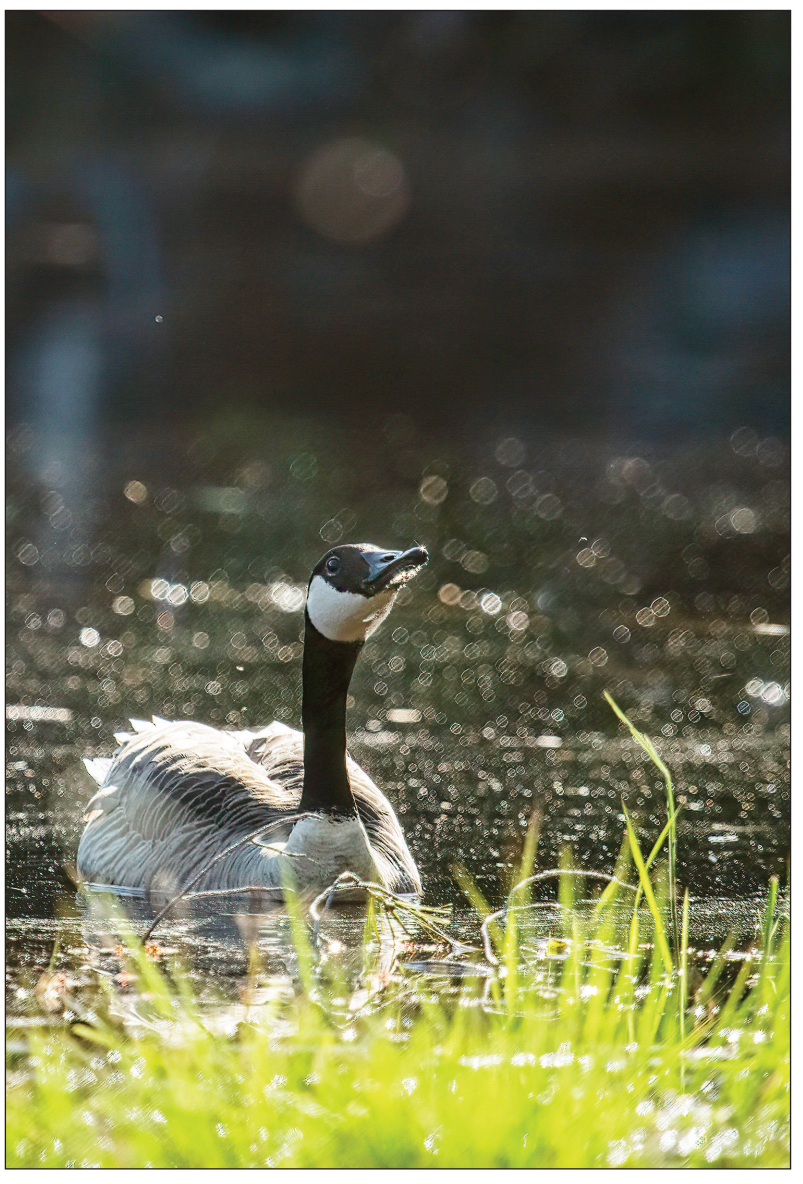
Area photographer Tammy Nash captured a fisher in the weeds.

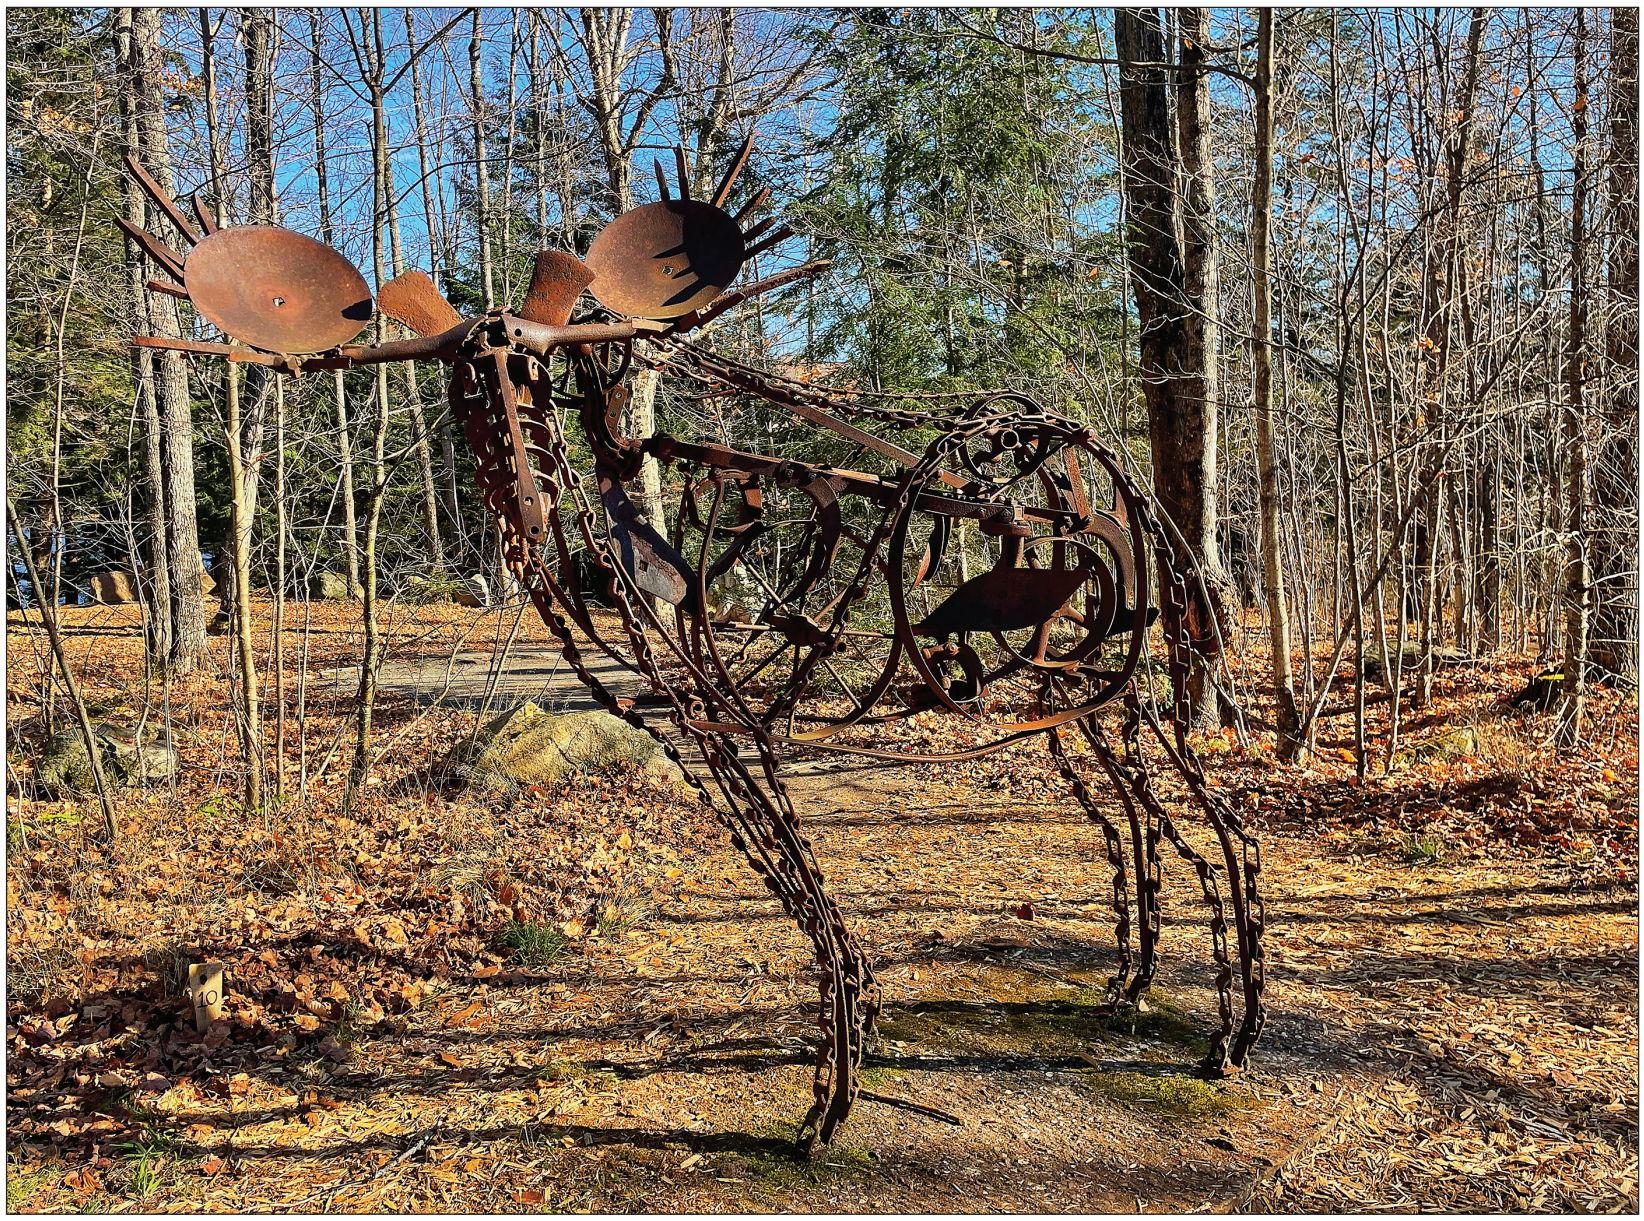


Area photographer Tammy Nash spotted a Canada goose at her pond by her residence in Algonquin Highlands.

A raccoon, as photographed by Tammy Nash of Algonquin Highlands.

"Started to rain this evening and I am packing up and I have my zoom lens with me to put away but, oh, no, I hear chippies and squirrels screaming and I scan the area and there is a beautiful fisher lurking through the woods. I already have my zoom lens in my hands, so I get a couple pictures of the fisher in the dark woods," Tammy Nash, area photographer said. Submitted by Tammy Nash

Local Landmark Mystery



Local Landmark Reveal: "Moose Scraps" in the Haliburton Sculpture Forest. Installed in 2001, this whimsical, yet powerful sculpture made from salvaged farm machinery and other metal scraps is one of the original sculptures in the outdoor gallery. Created by Leo Sepa, the moose is a full 2.5 metres in length. Sepa also created one of our other Local Landmarks: the scrap metal cyclist that is installed in front of the Agnes Jameson gallery in the village of Minden. Photo and concept by Thom Lambert.

WE DON'T BREW OUR BEER FOR THE AWARDS.

BUT HE DOES!

Our brewmaster, Andrew Kohnen, threw away a successful career in logistics to pursue his dream of reconnecting with the brewing roots of his family. This carried him to the UK's prestigious Brewlab in Sunderland, England, where he procured the alchemy that would drive his signature brewing style.

He took what he could from there and ventured to Scotland, Cornwall, and ultimately to Krefeld, Germany, working in the same brewery that had belonged to his ancestors. He came home to Canada for Hockley.

You could call it dumb, but we call it destiny.

Candidates hit the trail

Let the campaign begin.

The long-awaited call to the polls was issued last Wednesday by Premier Mike Harris and local candidates were quick to get the campaigning under way. The candidates hit the ground running because it will be one of the shortest in provincial history. With the writ issued May 5 and the vote scheduled for June 3, the campaighn will cover just 28 days.

Incumbent, PC Chris Hodgson.

Progressive Conservative nominee and incumbent, Chris Hodgson, was on the streets of Lindsay Thursday morning, less than 24 hours after the election was called. He was talking to voters on the city's main street and spent the evening working the neighbourhoods of the largest community in the riding. The candidate also opened his Lindsay campaign office on Cambridge Street.

Sharon McCrae was out meeting voters even before the Premier had announced the long anticipated election. Wednesday she travelled to a number of communities in the riding. Once she heard the election had been called officially, she began putting up campaign signs from the supply in the trunk of her car. She was also out meeting constituents on the street and lining up her election team.

Liberal challenger Sharon McCrae.

New Democratic candidate Rick Denyer, an employee at the Beer Store in Lindsay, had to complete his week at work before he could start serious campaigning. Friday night he completed his last day of work before beginning a leave of absence that will cover the campaign period. He planned to begin his campaign immediately,

HHSS students test their athletic abilities at the annual track and field meet

The annual HHSS track meet met with great weather and an enthusiastic crowd Thursday.

The bright sunshine brought many students to the side of the track to witness their fellow classmates compete and have fun in a number of track and field events. Coach Paul Morissette was pleased with the event as it ran smoothly throughout the day, and was happy to see so many students keeping fit and enjoying themselves by partaking in the HHSS track and field program.

For the fourth year in a row, Kate Campbell continued to write her name all over the record books, this year in the Senior Girls Division. With the 100 metres, 200 metres, and 400 metre hurdles records under her belt, Campbell now boasts over a dozen HHSS track records, and is looking forward to following up her gold medal finish at OFSAA last year with yet another record breaking season. Of course Campbell was not the only one to rewrite the record book. Liane Dron set a junior girls discus record with a toss of 31.96 metres. Cailey Sisson set a new pole vault record at 2.33 metres.

A number of boys' records changed as well. Kenny Mott set a new junior boys shot put record at 13.85 metres. Jesse Sternberg, Scot Curry, and Greg
